

Abolfazl Azari is a technical specialist with the I. R. of Iran Broadcasting (IRIB). He received his BSc and MSc in Electrical Engineering (majoring: Telecommunication) in 2007 and 2011 respectively with first class honours. He is a PhD candidate in wireless communication area now. He has published more than 15 referred papers in recognized ISI-indexed journals and conference proceedings. He is also a professional member of IEEE and a member of technical committee of the IEEE Antenna and Propagation Society. His research interests include modern antenna design, wave propagation, RF and microwave circuits, mobile communication (4G & 5G). He works at IRIB in spectrum engineering branch focusing on design, simulation and implementation of audio-visual distribution projects.